

ABSTRACT

A storage device is provided that is structured for use in operative association with a cable connected to at least a portion of an elevated structure. The storage device includes a base including a tool tray portion and a storage bin portion; at least one pedestal connected to the base; at least one hanger connected to at least one pedestal, the hanger structured for receiving at least a portion of the cable therein; and, the storage device is structured to be suspendable from the cable.